Dear Edward
A Novel
by Ann Napolitano
(The Dial Press)

“A dear, dear wondrous novel. Edward is The Miracle Boy, the only survivor of a plane crash. As he struggles to navigate the landscape of his new life, we hear the voices of those who didn’t make it. Napolitano is an amazing writer who deserves a wider audience. For fans of Did You Ever Have a Family (Bill Clegg), The Grief of Others (Leah Hager Cohen), and The Friend (Sigrid Nunez)!”

“The told in alternating viewpoints, this suspense tale centers on a secret involving two artists working on a mural 78 years apart. Excellent and engaging, with a twist!”

—Marilyn Sieb, L.D. Fargo Public Library, Lake Mills, WI

“Clementine Hozier never expected to be the wife of a man like Winston Churchill. In her latest fictional account of an overlooked historical figure, Benedict spotlights how Clementine helped her husband maneuver through good times and bad, finding her own voice along the way.”

—Chris Markley, Kingsport Public Library, Kingsport, TN

“A sweeping epic grounded in fact. In 1939, a Spanish family escapes the brutal rise of Franco and is brought by poet Pablo Neruda to Chile, only to see that country fall to its own dictatorial regime. Allende shows how, in an often cruel world, refugees can find homes in the hearts of one another. A profound and satisfying novel.”

—Jill Minor, Washington County Public Library, Abingdon, VA
